Stewardship

Temperatures are finally beginning to rise, and now comes the hard part – paying for the extra electricity used during the sub-freezing weather. These bills can be an impossible obstacle for those struggling to make ends meet. Seasonal work is at its lowest point, and parents have had to stay home from work to stay with kids when school was cancelled. Electricity bills are high and income is low. Every spring, St. Vincent de Paul experiences an increase in calls for help when the winter heating bills come due or result in cut-off notices. If you are able, please consider a donation to St. Vincent de Paul to help your neighbors with their utility bills. You can put a check in the collection at any Sunday Mass with "St. Vincent de Paul" in the memo line and be assured that it will help those in need and it will be added to your donation totals from CK. THANK YOU!

Sunday Reflection

"I am the God of your fathers..." Exodus 3:6

Recently, my son and I have been investigating our family genealogy. We traced lines of inheritance from the pilgrims to the Vikings, from Bavaria to France - but found our strongest connections with the Irish Catholic immigrants of the mid-1800s. It was an era when it was a liability to be Catholic and Irish, a population impoverished by two centuries of Penal Laws imposed by the British. Among other things, these laws deprived Irish Catholics of their property and their right to serve in government; banned Catholic priests and the celebration of the Mass; and outlawed all Catholic instruction.

The Irish farmer was a sharecropper tenant, farming potatoes to pay the rent. They lived on potatoes also, and not much else. When the potato blight spread across the land in 1845, their source of food was destroyed. At the same time, harsh, genocidal government policies were implemented. Landlords took this opportunity to evict their tenants, putting families out of their homes even in the dead of winter, and caving in the roofs to prevent their return. Thousands died of starvation and exposure. Soup kitchens often demanded that Catholics renounce their faith before receiving food. Before the famine ended in 1852, the small nation lost one million of its population to starvation and disease.

Another million immigrants left Ireland, journeying to lands where they often were not welcome. Many died aboard the overcrowded "coffin ships." Those who arrived in the United States faced more poverty, disease, and anti-Catholic prejudice. Yet, miraculously, these rejected, hated, poor immigrants began to make an impact on their new nation. They could once again teach their faith. They began to build churches, convents, schools and hospitals. The Catholic faith that so many of the Irish had died to defend grew strong and flourished in their new homeland.

This is our true inheritance; the faith of our fathers. But even now, we should not make the mistake of thinking we stand so secure that we cannot lose this treasured inheritance. We should never take for granted the victory won for us by Christ or forget the perseverance of those who went before us. We, in our season, should work as our ancestors did, to produce abundant fruit for the kingdom of God.

Carmelite Corner

Blessed Titus Brandsma, O. Carm, Spiritual Guide: portions from "Meditations on the Way of the Cross." Carmelite Press, 2004 (3 of 5)

7th Station: Jesus Falls the Second Time

My God, you can go no farther. The cross weighs on your shoulders. Although you do not have to drag it alone, the heavy tree weighs you down...O horrible fall! Your garment rasps your wounded skin and tears your wounds open again; the rough and unplanned beam of the cross cuts into arm and shoulder and drives the crown of thorns into your temple. ... And then I complain about heavy crosses. I faint only because I have neither the courage nor the love to carry them with you. Do not allow my deeds to be at variance with God's will.

8th Station: Jesus Consoles the Weeping Women

The women cannot utter a single word. They weep. For it was, indeed, a sight fit for tears. The grief of Jesus strikes them speechless and brings tears to their eyes.

Jesus, I followed you like the women, with a feeling of horror and pity. Now you tell me how I must follow you: "Do not weep for me, but for yourselves and for your children." Even though your suffering brings tears to my eyes, O good Jesus, I must acknowledge that it was my sins which caused you to be so cruelly mistreated and I must weep because I was the cause of your suffering.... United with you, O Jesus let me follow your way of the cross, repentant.

9th Station: Jesus Falls the Third Time

O Jesus, you have arrived but, alas, at the cost of your last strength. To the last, you have tortured yourself in order to arrive at the top of the hill. You have sacrificed your very last ounce of strength for us. Now you lie flat on the ground.

The journey to the place of torment has been completed, but only now will the cruelest of all tortures begin. Here there are no angels to comfort you; around you only grasping, tearing wolves, ready to lift you up indeed, in order to nail you to the cross.
